

Seeking New Registrant!

Monarch Midwives, a satellite office of the Midwives of Lindsay and the Lakes, is located in beautiful Port Perry, and is looking for a New Registrant to join us!

In the last couple of years, we have grown from a small office to the only midwifery practice in North Durham. We are currently two full-time midwives and one part-time with privileges at the Alongside Midwifery Unit at Markham Hospital. We have a vibrant rural practice with high home birth numbers, and all the benefits of urban settings close by.

We are an energetic, growth-oriented group of midwives who work at our full scope and seek out opportunities that interest us in the community. We enjoy an abundance of time off to enjoy travelling, seeking locum work across Canada and hanging out with our families. We are a collaborative practice with regular meetings, annual development retreats, and many social engagements together. We offer a transparent path to partnership for associates.

You would have a full case load built for you with 3 months off per year. The call model is open to negotiations as a team of two with lots of support or as primary care. Given that we are just moving from Cannington to Port Perry, we would like someone interested in engaging the community and building relationships with other health care providers. You will need to have privileges at the Alongside Midwifery Unit at Markham Hospital and Ross Memorial Hospital (just for home birth transfers that are directed there).

If you are enthusiastic and looking to grow and explore your passions and if you enjoy rural communities with the benefits of urban centres not too far away – we would love to hear from you!
